

Kim Hinton, MBA

Kim Hinton is a business strategist, experienced speaker and social entrepreneur who use her business acumen to develop innovative solutions to amass social capital to address social and economic challenges in communities. She utilizes her keen analytical skills, financial insights, and team approach to facilitate community change. She is an experienced leader with over twenty-five years of experience in corporate operations, nonprofit management, and program development and implementation. She has worked with states and communities across the nation developing innovative initiatives and programs, policies & strategies that improve addresses the most challenging social issues.

As the Principle for Webster's Wealth Management Solutions Corporation (WWMS), she leads her team in providing turnkey solutions for businesses in the areas of finance and administrative support. Her background in financial management, capacity building and training and overall strategic planning and management is instrumental in providing quality service to her clients. Consistently she is placed in leadership positions because of her reputation as someone who can see the overall organizational goals and the ability to bring people and stakeholders together for the improvement of their organization. She provides solutions you can trust. All of the profits from WWMS are donated to her philanthropic work.

An AmeriCorps*VISTA alumni she worked in an underserved public housing community in Southeast Washington DC, she developed programs that met the social, academic, and emotional needs of underserved residents - youth and adults. Becoming an AmeriCorps VISTA was one of the proudest moments of Ms. Hinton's life. As a result of her tour of duty, she founded Journey to Your Promised Land, Inc. (JTYPL) an international nonprofit tax-exempt organization established to end poverty by providing educational information, resources, advocacy and training to all women and youth across the world. Her vision is to transcend the exploitation of women and youth throughout the world where everyone is treated equally. Her hope is for a world where poverty is eradicated.

She believes that JTYPL will be a key influencer in the fight to end poverty and the deprivation of resources for women and youth. Partnering with individuals and corporations who have a shared value proposition around education, job training, job creation, and advocacy are needed to develop and implement a social movement to help those who are poor get out of poverty and eliminate the conditions that allow poverty to keep a stranglehold on communities. JTYPL is Ms. Hinton's passion project as well as her way to give back to society and the world.

Kim has a Masters of Business Administration in Finance, a bachelor's degree in Organizational Management, and certifications in training, community development, and finance related fields. She is the DC branch board president of the American Association of University of Women and a board member of the House of Ruth of Maryland. She also spends her time as a volunteer lobbyist for the American Association of University of Women fighting for issues facing women – such as education, civil rights, reproduction rights, and economic security.